

ISO 9001:2008 Certification Furthers Letica Corporation's Commitment to Efficient and Sustainable Packaging

Increased Efficiency and Customer Confidence is Result

Rochester, MI, June 1, 2010 - Letica Corporation announces certification to the ISO9001:2008 standard for its Corporate Headquarters and Technical Center as well as its manufacturing facility in Fremont, Indiana. Over 40 years of design and manufacturing of rigid and foodservice packaging combined with 18 months of documentation and process refinements will culminate at years end with the ISO certification planned for Letica's remaining 12 U.S. manufacturing facilities.

Being the only ISO9001:2008 registered company in its category provides Letica's customers added assurance of adherence to the most thorough design, development, and manufacturing process standards. The resulting products can be depended on to be consistently best-in-class.

From its beginning, Letica Corporation has incorporated sustainability practices within its business activities. It is their mission to drive continuous improvement through material reduction, energy conservation, and recycling awareness without compromising performance, aesthetics, or productivity. The ISO 9001:2008 certification is just the latest Letica Corporation initiative to reinforce its position as the premier supplier in packaging for a broad range of products and applications.
